H15 BOUTIQUE HOTEL

Given this 19th-century building's prominence as a former seat of influence in Warsaw, it's fitting that the new H15 Boutique Hotel plays an active role in the life of the Polish capital.

To check into H15 Boutique Hotel, located on one of the oldest streets in central Warsaw, is to stay at the epicenter of European history. The 19th-century building, originally constructed as a grand private residence, has hosted secret meetings for Polish independence prior to WWI, been home to a Soviet embassy, a headquarters for the Nazi party, and a prize possession of the People's Republic of Poland. Today, following a recent five-year gut renovation, this impressive 46-room gem celebrates its storied past while also emerging as a glorious example of contemporary luxury.

Here, amid the hotel's many modern touches and individually designed artwork, one still finds ornamentation from the Soviet embassy days, making H15 a stunning example of past-meets-present.

In 1941 the building was taken over by the Third Reich – it became one of Wehrmacht quarters. Germans did not get rid of Soviet symbols, treating them like trophies. Paradoxically, the Wehrmacht saved it during bombing after the defeat of the Warsaw Uprising. After The Second World War, People's Republic took care of the property. Later it belonged to the largest shipping company in Poland.

Between 2007 -2012 the building underwent a massive restoration which culminated with the opening of H15 Boutique in June 2012. Despite the modern look of the apartments, the majority of the original decorations from the Soviet Union Embassy are still present in the building.
